Resin acetate induced acute hepatic injury in 2 patients on chronic acetylcysteine (N-acetyl-L-cysteine) therapy for gastroduodenal ulcer disease. The first patient, an 88-year-old male with gastric ulcer treated since March 1988, presented an acute hepatic injury occurring after the ingestion of two acetylcysteine tablets over a one-week period. Liver biopsy proved moderate steatosis and hepatic necrosis with evidence of early phase cholestasis and hepatic encephalopathy. The second patient, a 35-year-old male with duodenal ulcer, was treated with acetylcysteine for the last 4 months and presented acute hepatotoxicity, manifested by jaundice and hepatic encephalopathy, after 7 acetylcysteine tablets within a one-week period. Liver biopsy showed a moderate steatosis and cholestasis with mild inflammatory infiltrate. Liver injury regressed in both patients after acetylcysteine discontinuation. Although this mechanism of hypersensitivity is well known, we believe that the administration of acetylcysteine to patients receiving drug treatment who have not been previously exposed should be carefully considered and monitored.

Q: Why must S be of positive dimension? I have seen a couple definitions for the Hilbert Scheme of a projective variety, but the one which seems to fit best the majority of the example I am seeing (as it is the most general): Let S be a projective algebraic variety and let \mathcal{I} be a sheaf of ideals in $\mathbb{R} = k[x_0, \dots, x_n]$. Let $X = \text{Proj}(\mathbb{R}/\mathcal{I})$. Let $G = \text{Proj}(S^{\circlearrowleft})$. Then the Hilbert Scheme $G \rightarrow X$ is defined as follows: (i) Let $\mathcal{I}_{(d)}$ be the ideal sheaf in $S = k[x_0, \dots, x_n]/I^{(d)}$ where $I^{(d)}$ is the ideal generated by I^k for all $k \leq d$. Let $X_{(d)}$
