This program is freeware to test.Q: MySQL Join Query with Dates and Closest Date when date is null I have a query that I want to join two tables together. The first table, 'cur_fee' has a column called 'fees_date' and the second table, 'fees' has a column called 'fees_date'. The two tables have a similar structure - a 'fees' table that has payments in it, and a 'cur_fee' table that has fees. I want to pull the three fields - cur_fee id, fees_date, fees_amount for all rows in the fees table, and pull the closest (closest here in the sense of the fees that apply to the closest payment within the 'cur_fee' table). The first two columns in both tables are foreign keys pointing to the same id in the 'cur_fee' table. Here is the query I have so far: SELECT * FROM fees.fees INNER JOIN cur_fee.cur_fee ON fees.fees_fee_id = cur_fee.cur_fee_id Basically, I am trying to use the fees_date for the first table but I am uncertain of how to pull in the 'closest_date' since it could have no value, or a lot of value in all instances. The closest I have so far is pulling in the same amount as the fees_date (if there are more dates in the fees table) which causes the result to repeat the fees for each time a date in the fees table occurs (for a start). In addition, the fees_date column is not guaranteed to be a date. If it is a float, it will be pulled to the nearest whole number which may then not always be a date. This is why I am not trying to use the least date in the fees table like I was initially. In the ideal result, I would get a row for each payment in the fees table - the one that has the next highest fees_date in the cur_fee table. Hopefully I have explained this clearly enough. I have tried to come up with some sample
