“Over two years in the making, we have evolved our engine to better represent the subtle movements of the players, delivered by the revolutionary HyperMotion technology. We’re thrilled to provide a new layer of realism that opens up a new category of gameplay and is completely boundless.” John Chen, Managing Director of EA SPORTS Players will be able to perform stutter-stepping feints to create space for themselves and their teammates, use blindside feints to deceive and create space on the pitch, and break away from defending players by using footwork and runs to create space on the pitch. When the ball is in motion, the ball will now instinctively adjust to the player and player will have different finishing methods available to them, whether it be hitting a shot towards the goal, or cutting a through-ball. The goalkeepers also now have the ability to easily change their body shape when anticipating a shot, allowing them to dart out of the way for a crucial save. FIFA 22 will be available on Xbox One, PlayStation 4, the all-in-one system from EA SPORTS, Nintendo Switch, as well as PC and Mac. Complex interventions in acute care medicine: systematic reviews of their application. The evidence base for health care practice in medical emergencies is sparse and diverse. We aimed to systematically review the evidence base for interventions used in acute care medicine that do not involve cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). Searches of MEDLINE and EMBASE up to April 2003 identified articles reporting the application of any intervention for acute care medicine. Studies were selected for full-text review and assessment of risk of bias using the SIGN search strategy tool. The Internet was searched for additional studies. Fifty-one studies were included. A variety of interventions were tested in patients and in staff. These included: use of tourniquets or elastic bands; compression at different depths; placement of intravenous or intraosseous (IO) cannulae; whole or selective blood transfusion; intravenous (IV) fluids, including use of low- versus high-molecular-weight heparin; oxygen; sedation; neuromuscular blocking agents; lignocaine infiltration; pre- and post-icarizine; and team training. Safety was rarely studied. There was limited evidence for any benefit, although staff outcomes were better with deep venous thrombosis prophylaxis. We identified no studies that
