In some machines, the work implement may be hydraulically-driven. These work machines may also be equipped with a steering system that uses angle sensors to determine the desired steering angle based on a desired vehicle direction in which the work machine is to travel. In a steering system, the angle sensors are typically mounted to one or more steering shafts. The steering shafts are operably connected to a steering system controller, which controls the operation of the hydraulic steering valve. Due to the large torque that is generated by the rotating steering shaft, the angle sensors used in such a steering system are typically a combination of a harmonic drive and an absolute encoder. Q: Net.TCP Server - Any TCP ports 0.0.0.0? I'm writing a simple Windows service in .NET, and using the Network Library to open a TCP listener on port 8888. The line I'm using is `NetworkStream netStream = Net.Sockets.TcpListener.Bind(new IPEndPoint(IPAddress.Any, 8888))` So, the only point of interest is that 'IPEndPoint' specifies a port of 0.0.0.0, but I'm not certain whether or not this applies to Net.TCP too. Can anyone confirm, please? A: IPEndPoint.Any means that the client will be able to connect to the server on any IP address. Q: Better way to add a view everytime you click a UIButton I have a "bulletin board type" layout in storyboard, it has multiple view controller each of them has a UIButton, when user clicks any UIButton, I want to add the next view controller programmatically like this: `-(void)addItem: (UIButton *) button { NextViewController *next = [[NextViewController alloc] init]; [self addChildViewController: next]; next.view.frame = CGRectMake(100, 100, 160, 120); [self.view addSubview: next.view]; [next didMoveToParentViewController:self]; }` It doesn't work like this way, it returns a `EXC_BAD_ACCESS` but I'm not sure what cause the problem, maybe I should handle the memory stuff like this: `-(void)addItem: (UIButton *) button { NextViewController *next = [[NextViewController alloc] init]; UIButton *aButton = button; [self addChildViewController: next]; next.view.frame = CGRectMake(100, 100, 160, 120); [self.view addSubview: next.view]; [next didMoveToParentViewController:self]; next.view.frame = CGRectMake(100, 100, 160, 120); }`
