Moller-Maersk's top man on the board of directors, Niels Jensen, has gone public with a view that the future of the world's most powerful container ship company is not in the hands of his board. Mr. Jensen told Bloomberg that the current strategic direction of the company, which is 75% owned by Maersk, is "not positive at all." Mr. Jensen, who joined the board in March and has been tasked with the task of picking the company's next chief executive, is the man who literally wrote the book on container shipping. His position is that Maersk, with more than 100 000 employees, is a company that delivers goods globally, and the proof lies in Maersk's track record of shipping. He has
