SolidWorks will have to follow the crowd though as all of their partners will have to migrate to this OS (be it Unix, Linux, . Also, Microsoft will forced to do things like support 64-bit products in their software. At the same time, Microsoft will have to follow in the same direction, and I don't see how it is going to do. I would imagine that Windows 7 will have support issues and that means users will be forced to move to other OSes. Microsoft may support their OS long term, but I don't see that in current scenarios.
