If you try to upgrade your PC, an error message will appear which tells that the upgrade process failed. This is normal. You can choose to cancel the update process if you are not interested in the new updates. These days, most of us use Zip files almost daily to put an assortment of files into one file that is called "a compressed file". Basically, you will use this method to store music, images, and many other files on your computer. Since this method is quite popular, we recommend using the option in Adobe Flash Player, or, as the case may be, from the folder option on the Explorer. However, there are times when the Zip files have errors that not only make them unreadable, but also, can cause the task you've done with it to not be complete, or even worse, corrupt some of the files inside. Therefore, you may lose your work! Therefore, this article will help you by providing methods to fix the error "headers error" of your Zip files. When you download your favorite Zip file, you may find that it is not damaged. However, if you use other programs to open it, the files that contain the error message, such as those that are under the header or some other files such as those that are under the static text, may cause an error, which is one of the many problems caused by the virus. Fortunately, Stellar File Repair can automatically repair damaged files. By scanning the entire Zip file at once, it can detect and repair all the damaged files and rectify the errors that occur.
