Tracer Programming: window for the operators to enter data when operating Tracer The Data Collection window contains a variety of controls to enter data into the system when the operator changes the state of one or more operating controls. Figure 15, p. 46. The Data Log window contains a variety of controls for entry and review of data logged during an operator run. The control choices include: viewing the data entered in the Data Collection window, inserting data that was not entered or selected by the operator, specifying a data value, viewing a comma-separated value (CSV) export file, and more. Figure 16, p. 47. The Data Log window also includes controls for logging information about changes made by an operator. The Log window contains a variety of controls for these purposes: The Log Status controls allow an operator to view the log information displayed in the log window. These controls: hold the contents of the log in memory until an operator's run has completed; and instruct the log to be written to a file when the operator's run completes. The Audit Current Event controls configure the ability of an operator to see how his current run has impacted the control's configuration parameters. These controls: allow an operator to make selections of controls that previously were previously configured, and the impact of the selections on the configuration; do not allow the operator to make selections of controls that are not configured. The Event Duration controls allow an operator to specify a time limit of the entire operator's run.
