Numerous outbreaks of listeriosis have been reported in humans around the world. L. monocytogenes strain RAI14 (serotype 4b) was isolated from the blood of a 55-year-old woman, who had a history of liver disease, in Brazil in 2007. RAI14 is a food isolate that was found to be an aplasmid-carrying strain. RAI14 carries four aplastic plasmids ([@B1]). The three largest aplasmids, apl1 (26,299 bp), apl2 (25,936 bp), and apl3 (4,684 bp), were sequenced in the current study. The genome sequence of L. monocytogenes RAI14 was determined using an Illumina HiSeq 2000 platform with an average read length of 109

A: This is a common method of preventing piracy, but can quickly become unwieldy: Serial numbering stops as soon as the first pirated software is sold. This is the primary limitation of any of these methods. Note that the malware authors simply insert a number for each copy of the software. Note that it is the owners of the software who have to be protected. A better solution is to use a public-key cryptosystem such as OpenPGP: The publisher encrypts the software using a public key and generates a digital signature. The software is distributed using an open standard. This does not require a public key. Here is an example: The developer generates a public key A and private key B. The publisher encrypts a software file using A. The end user can verify it is genuine by verifying that B has been digitally signed. This is done using the key B. See the GPG manual, "What is PGP" and "The GPG Public Key System (Why and How)" Gondar Airport Gondar Airport is an airport serving Gondar, the capital of the Amhara Region of Ethiopia. The airport is in the eastern outskirts of the city, southeast of the central business district. The runway is in a valley with higher terrain on all sides, and only a paved surface remains. The airport has a single, unpaved overrun on the north end of the runway. The Gondar non-directional beacon (Ident: GND) is located northeast of the airport. Airlines and destinations See f988f36e3a
